Gregory
Burns

In a world where sport and art are often said to coexist but may seem far apart, Gregory Burns proves daily that the adage can indeed be true at the highest levels. Gregory is a world-class contemporary painter, whose exhibitions in Asia, Europe and the United States have been received enthusiastically - including by former Singaporean and American Presidents. He is also a world champion swimmer, capturing gold medals and setting world records in the last three Paralympic Games.

The artist-athlete's exhibition entitled, "Searching for Sanctuary" opened last month at Hong Kong's Pacific Place. It included five series of works completed since his departure from Hong Kong in 1995. Exhibiting a strong yet subtle style, these spirited works painted on-site in China, Cambodia, Myanmar and Europe showed the artist's progression over the past eight years. In Gregory's work, we witness the rebirth of modern expressionism infused with a profound sense of humane feeling and peacefulness: deep colors with an intense luminosity, simple and clear construction pointing towards the essential while touching the soul.
